And you if you consider my opinion sound upon the important question of the action of the Government with reference to your consideration, to again return me at the forthcoming election, I will be glad to be again elected to the same office, and will show that the existing land laws are most unsatisfactory and not likely to promote the interests of the great country in which we all ultimately take an interest.

Yours faithfully,
HARMAN J. TARBAN

207, Macquarie-street,
November 23, 1885.

TO THE ELECTORS OF WELLINGTON.

Gentlemen,—Parliament having been dissolved, the opportunity is afforded of expressing an opinion as to the action of the Executive which will faithfully serve you and do his duty to the country generally. I am an Australian, and am ambitious of securing for my country the best possible system of land tenure.

In your electoral I am not a stranger. Doubtless very many of you are aware that I have been a resident of this country for the last 20 years, and that I have been a member of the House of Representatives (at which latter place I have great interests) for upwards of fifteen years; and being conversant with the land laws of the Colonies, and the necessities of the community, and the Western country, I am not ignorant of the wants and requirements of the electors of country districts.

There are many subjects which will require attention to when I am again elected to the House of Representatives, but the following are some of my political views:—

[illegible]

Public instruction is a right of the citizen, and the Government is bound to provide it. It is a right which cannot be taken away from the citizen, and it is a right which is not subject to the caprice of the Government. It is a right which is not subject to the caprice of the Government, and it is a right which is not subject to the caprice of the Government.

On all other subjects, I will address you personally in a way of two.

Yours faithfully,
WM. THOS. A. SHORTER.

Claremont, Peterham.
THE ELECTORS OF BUCKRE.

Gentlemen, I have upon former occasions referred to take myself to be nominated for a seat in the Legislative Assembly.
Having now been requested to come forward, I have the pleasure to do so. I proceed briefly and clearly to explain my views.

1. I consider the Government for interference with the
with the exception of Chinese immigration, which I would oppose.

2. I consider the mining interest one of the most important, and I would strongly support the Government in all measures in favour of the extension of lines of railway throughout the interior of the colony, and the maintenance of a proper system of roads, bridges, and storage of water.

3. I consider that the land law urgently requires amendment.
An extraordinary case has occurred in the Land Bill, which is all material, potential instead with the Acts which have been in force for some 20 years. The case is that the Government have been found to have failed most lamentably in carrying out the intentions of the author to settle the people upon the land. I look upon this as one of the greatest failures of the Government of the country to any particular class, but to the people as a whole, and I consider it my duty to support the Government in all measures benefit from them by making those who occupy them pay

[illegible]

Again thanking you for the honour you have done me,
I remain, Gentlemen,
Your most obedient servant,
WARDEN HARRY GRAYE

Gentlemen,—I am again a candidate for your suffrages. Owing to the very short time allowed for the election (polling day being Saturday next, 2d December), and the electorate being so large, I shall be unable to visit all the polling places. I am known to almost every elector within the police district of Berrima, and my views on political questions are also pretty well known, therefore I trust that my inability to visit any polling place will not

The Land question is the question on which Parliament will be dissolved, but in my opinion still another Parliament will be dissolved before it is finally settled. It is proposed to give the Crown lessees half their runs on 13 or 20 years' leases, the other half only being open to free selection. I am not in favour of this; the selector should be allowed to select land in any part of the colony, provided it is for bona-fide settlement. The principle of "free selection before survey" was fought for and won in 1860, and we should now fight to retain it. Mr. Stuart and those who voted to select the maximum quantity more insurance companies. The Provision might also be made to enable men in millions of in business in towns to acquire homestead farms, but this provision would have to be strictly guarded in order to prevent abuses.

The area allowed to be selected might be increased to 5000 acres, and the deposit reduced to 1s per acre; no person to be allowed to select more than 10 or 12 acres.

The Licensing Bill has produced good results, but it is insisted on all sides that some amendments are necessary; Sunday selling to travellers or any one else should be entirely stopped.

On the Education question my views are pretty well known, being always an advocate and supporter of the principles contained in the Public Instruction Bill. My vote shall not be given until the Education Bill is amended. My vote from the State in aid of the Education Bill is as follows:

The above is an outline of the opinions I hold, and if they meet with your approval in the main, I trust you will see the necessity of using every endeavour for the purpose of securing the return of a local candidate, there being in the last Parliament too many residents of Sydney, and in consequence country districts do not

SEN NOMINATION

John Robertson wanted to perpetuate all the misery which had arisen under the present land law; but the House said: Let it cease; define what belongs to the squatter and what belongs to the selector in a proper manner, and let the two classes in future live in harmony and peace." Differently the squatters had only been paying a farthing or halfpenny per acre, but under a new system the public would get 2d. or 3d. per acre and derive about £2,000,000. An Actor: "Some of the land is not worth a farthing per acre." That was true. But what was wanted was a classification of the lands. If the

to have to London. He thought the amending Land Bill Sir John Robinson would meet the requirements of the Government, and he was glad to see that the roads cut up by the heavy traffic in connection with the bridge had been met by the Government, but the money was not yet voted. It was true that leaders for the North Shore bridge had been found, but it was not known whether or not they were accepted. No tender had been accepted, and would not be without sanction of Parliament.

Mr. McCLELLAN who received with much satisfaction the eighth time he had stood upon his hind legs to address them, he had stood there very low heart, and he had stood there in very high spirits, and he had stood there in every position of occasion. should have some guarantee that they were a certain time to recoup themselves for the momentary loss of their earnings. The Government took another measure which required reform. It was the abolition of the chattri system, which was connected with the heat of fanaticism, and the hotelkeepers received the same tariff under it. He would support a further measure to be introduced in the Budget, namely, that the working man might get his best days as well as the quarter could obtain him the same amount of money. The Government proposed the eight-hours' system, he contended, that it should be extended as far as possible. On all Government work men employed should only work four hours a day, and the Government should not put any more men in a Workshop and Factories Act introduced in this colony, such as the English one, perfected by Mr. Gladstone in 1874. It would put the Government in a position to make it one of his duties to strongly advocate it.

Mr. Murray addressed the electors at the 10 o'clock hour. He was warmly received. Murray was enthusiastically received. Mr. J.P., was in the chair. and the Ministers who have made the appeal are trying to obscure the principal issue, while it is the Opposition who are trying to bring the people to the one point which is the real issue. Obviously, the reason for this is that Ministers feel that the question on which they have dissolved is not their strong point, while the Opposition feel that it is their strong point. We equally do not have seen Ministers raising the question of the Education question, or pointing out the danger of (Chinese immigration, or hinting at a Civil Service Bill, or promising working men a stricter adherence to eight hours and higher pay, if they had not felt that on the question on which they had chosen to appeal to the people they were rather weak.

And they are weak, for two reasons—first, because the cause itself is not intrinsically a good one; and secondly, because feeling that they are not very hearty in its support, they say all they can on behalf of the bill. They say they submitted to Parliament, and on which they were defeated, and of course there is a good deal which they can say. But their speeches are exactly like the pleadings of a counsel who knows he has got a bad case, and who is asking the jury to take the most lenient view of the case, and above all to take the prisoner's good character into their consideration. This has been obvious to the electors throughout the campaign, and it has had a marked influence on the voting.

Adding this, the question naturally arises, how came Ministers to dissolve on a question on which they were not thoroughly hearty? To answer this question fully we may have to wait till records now secret are revealed. One of the suburban candidates told his audience the other day that he knew on good authority that Sir Henry PARKES had done his best in the Cabinet to prevent the Land Bill from being brought forward. The speaker did not give this good authority, and we can only conjecture as to whether the rumour is true. It is not intrinsically improbable, for as stated a politician as the PREMIER might easily have foreseen the complications that might arise.

Admitting, however, that it was true, it does not justify the dissolution. One Minister in a Cabinet must make up his mind to defer, more or less, to the opinions of his colleagues, even if he is the Premier, and in the case of a coalition Cabinet, containing two or three political opponents, who have for years been rivals, with about equal power, such mutual deference is inevitable. Even such a concession as this time would readily admit that in the Cabinet he was greatly out of the Land question by the presence of Sir JOHN ROBERTSON. Deference to him on that question was the price paid for the coalition. The country, which has accepted the coalition for the sake of its practical convenience, cannot severely censure Sir HENRY PARKES because he was not obstinate and unwilling to compromise. But a compromise in the Cabinet is a very different thing from a compromise of principle on the hustings. Having consented to the introduction of the bill, the PREMIER was bound by loyalty to his colleagues to stand the Parliamentary consequences. But does it follow that when that bill was rejected he was bound to appeal to the country on it? Certainly not. Loyalty to Sir JOHN ROBERTSON did not require him to be disloyal to himself, or to disavow his constituents.

The defeat of the bill involved one of two consequences—either that the coalition should be broken up, or that those members of the Government who would rather the bill should not have been introduced should go to the public and indirectly defend it. Nothing could justify the latter course. It would have been better in any way for the country that the Ministry should have been broken up, and that the Government should have been dissolved, and that the country should have been left to choose between the two parties.

Another very grave difficulty arises as to the remuneration of the soil under the direction of alien owners. The cotton planters are foreigners. Their presence in the land is for purely personal ends—they want to make money. To them it is a question of success or failure, and what kind of labour will best suit their ends. Under such circumstances as are detailed above, the Fijian is not the best workman; and the planters naturally look around to see where the best can be found. They have come to the conclusion that coolie labour is better than Polynesian. But the introduction of coolie labour cannot be the work of an individual, or even of a company; like our own immigration schemes, it must be colonial. It is clear that the Government must find the money; and to do this the Government must have security. The planters offer their lands; the Government replies, your lands may not be worth more than your word. Suppose crops fail, suppose markets fall, what is your land worth and who then is to pay? The Government has not yet consented to recommend a loan.

"Night after night," says Mr. McELHONN, "Sir HENRY PARKES put me up to move the adjournment, to stop Sir JOHN from doing any work. It is proverbial that when people of a certain class fall out, people of another get their due. The verdict of the impartial historian will be that he was not unjustly punished."

Judging by the letters of our correspondent in Fiji that latest-born of Crown colonies cannot yet "run alone." In this it is no exception to Crown colonies the world over. One of the first difficulties in all such cases, and a great one, is to settle questions of titles to real estate said to have been alienated by native owners. There were in Fiji, when the colony was founded, a great many persons who had, or who believed that they had, perfectly valid titles to lands in their possession, and who, naturally, urged that these titles should be ratified by the issue of Crown grants. It has been a long and difficult task to examine these claims, and as yet they are not all disposed of. The root of the difficulty lies deep in the native idea and custom as to the alienation of land. In Tonga it has been definitely determined and proclaimed that no land can be alienated even to the native inhabitants, and much less would it be to foreigners. In Fiji there is the same latent belief that land cannot be absolutely and finally disposed of so that the fee-simple can be held against all claimants. To this must be added the almost insuperable difficulty of determining who has the power to make such alienation as is at all admissible, and also to be quite sure that such person or persons went through the necessary formalities. To the legal difficulty there is added one coming under the question of equity. When the native parted with their lands, did they receive what was at the time a fair equivalent in exchange? Our information from other sources suggests that the difficulties in Fiji are much aggravated by inexperience in the administration of Real Property Acts. But in this case, as in many others, time is the friend of man, and experience is one of the best of teachers.

Meanwhile, the settlers in Fiji are discontented. They have formed a Land Claimants' Protection Society for the purpose of bringing before the Home Government the manner in which their land claims have been dealt with. A letter has been written to Sir HENRY PARKES, thanking him for calling attention to a petition for further investigation of their claims; and they have also forwarded a memorandum to the SECRETARY OF STATE for the Colonies, praying that they may be allowed an opportunity to reply to any denial by Sir A. Gordon of the statements contained in their petition.

A difficulty more lasting and more irritating than the above, because it personally affects a large number of persons, and in this case the natives of the soil, is that of raising public revenue. Formerly only so much was exacted from the people as would suffice to supply the scanty table and scantier wardrobe of the chiefs. But now, over and above that, a revenue must be raised for the maintenance of the Government. It used to be only King Loe, now it is King Sirok as well. The resources of the country are amply sufficient to fill the coffers of these potentates, but the question now is how to get the people to work the land up to that point and beyond, so that, beside rest and recreation, there shall be a fair reward to themselves for their own labour. Their previous life has been all against them in this respect: their climate induces idleness, and the activities of savage existence are never industrial, but only for amusement or war. These are difficult things for most aboriginals to understand; and almost none but negroes amongst coloured races ever completely unlearn them. The negro, comparatively, is a born slave, and Fiji is a born gentleman. In enforcing labour on him we outrage his feelings; and he, not now he must work alongside of her in the field, and is thus reduced to the level at which he has always ranked her, and that is a low one. All this is giving trouble, and is likely to do so more and more. A resident of 29 years standing in Fiji writes through the press to state that, under Sir A. Gordon's garden scheme, women of many villages have been compelled to travel long distances, crossing mountain streams, under threat of imprisonment if they were absent from the gardens. The hardships they endure under this regime appear to be very severe. One case referred to is that of a woman who was ordered to the Government plantation, distant some six miles. She worked until her condition attracted the attention of other women working with her. They advised her to retire. She left the plantation, was delivered of a child the same night, and in a few days both mother and child died. Other cases no less distressful are given in painful detail. Up to a certain point this enforced labour must be done. It has to be done in Tonga, and it has been done in New Zealand and in this country, the native races might have had a chance for life, but now that chance is lost for ever. We too easily give the old civilisations a bad name, but let us suppose that the old civilisations had tried to teach the native races the value of labour, its value in developing the soil, in knitting together families and tribes, instead of teaching, as has too frequently been done, the value of money only as a means of vice. In Fiji the better idea is being tried, but it is to be feared that it is being tried on a model which may produce as complete a failure as wrong ideas have produced elsewhere. And to all this must be added the fact that the Fijian feels he is not working to raise his own family or tribe, but to support a foreign Government.

Another very grave difficulty arises as to the remuneration of the soil under the direction of alien owners. The cotton planters are foreigners. Their presence in the land is for purely personal ends—they want to make money. To them it is a question of success or failure, and what kind of labour will best suit their ends. Under such circumstances as are detailed above, the Fijian is not the best workman; and the planters naturally look around to see where the best can be found. They have come to the conclusion that coolie labour is better than Polynesian. But the introduction of coolie labour cannot be the work of an individual, or even of a company; like our own immigration schemes, it must be colonial. It is clear that the Government must find the money; and to do this the Government must have security. The planters offer their lands; the Government replies, your lands may not be worth more than your word. Suppose crops fail, suppose markets fall, what is your land worth and who then is to pay? The Government has not yet consented to recommend a loan.

"Night after night," says Mr. McELHONN, "Sir HENRY PARKES put me up to move the adjournment, to stop Sir JOHN from doing any work. It is proverbial that when people of a certain class fall out, people of another get their due. The verdict of the impartial historian will be that he was not unjustly punished."

Judging by the letters of our correspondent in Fiji that latest-born of Crown colonies cannot yet "run alone." In this it is no exception to Crown colonies the world over. One of the first difficulties in all such cases, and a great one, is to settle questions of titles to real estate said to have been alienated by native owners. There were in Fiji, when the colony was founded, a great many persons who had, or who believed that they had, perfectly valid titles to lands in their possession, and who, naturally, urged that these titles should be ratified by the issue of Crown grants. It has been a long and difficult task to examine these claims, and as yet they are not all disposed of. The root of the difficulty lies deep in the native idea and custom as to the alienation of land. In Tonga it has been definitely determined and proclaimed that no land can be alienated even to the native inhabitants, and much less would it be to foreigners. In Fiji there is the same latent belief that land cannot be absolutely and finally disposed of so that the fee-simple can be held against all claimants. To this must be added the almost insuperable difficulty of determining who has the power to make such alienation as is at all admissible, and also to be quite sure that such person or persons went through the necessary formalities. To the legal difficulty there is added one coming under the question of equity. When the native parted with their lands, did they receive what was at the time a fair equivalent in exchange? Our information from other sources suggests that the difficulties in Fiji are much aggravated by inexperience in the administration of Real Property Acts. But in this case, as in many others, time is the friend of man, and experience is one of the best of teachers.

Meanwhile, the settlers in Fiji are discontented. They have formed a Land Claimants' Protection Society for the purpose of bringing before the Home Government the manner in which their land claims have been dealt with. A letter has been written to Sir HENRY PARKES, thanking him for calling attention to a petition for further investigation of their claims; and they have also forwarded a memorandum to the SECRETARY OF STATE for the Colonies, praying that they may be allowed an opportunity to reply to any denial by Sir A. Gordon of the statements contained in their petition.

A difficulty more lasting and more irritating than the above, because it personally affects a large number of persons, and in this case the natives of the soil, is that of raising public revenue. Formerly only so much was exacted from the people as would suffice to supply the scanty table and scantier wardrobe of the chiefs. But now, over and above that, a revenue must be raised for the maintenance of the Government. It used to be only King Loe, now it is King Sirok as well. The resources of the country are amply sufficient to fill the coffers of these potentates, but the question now is how to get the people to work the land up to that point and beyond, so that, beside rest and recreation, there shall be a fair reward to themselves for their own labour. Their previous life has been all against them in this respect: their climate induces idleness, and the activities of savage existence are never industrial, but only for amusement or war. These are difficult things for most aboriginals to understand; and almost none but negroes amongst coloured races ever completely unlearn them. The negro, comparatively, is a born slave, and Fiji is a born gentleman. In enforcing labour on him we outrage his feelings; and he, not now he must work alongside of her in the field, and is thus reduced to the level at which he has always ranked her, and that is a low one. All this is giving trouble, and is likely to do so more and more. A resident of 29 years standing in Fiji writes through the press to state that, under Sir A. Gordon's garden scheme, women of many villages have been compelled to travel long distances, crossing mountain streams, under threat of imprisonment if they were absent from the gardens. The hardships they endure under this regime appear to be very severe. One case referred to is that of a woman who was ordered to the Government plantation, distant some six miles. She worked until her condition attracted the attention of other women working with her. They advised her to retire. She left the plantation, was delivered of a child the same night, and in a few days both mother and child died. Other cases no less distressful are given in painful detail. Up to a certain point this enforced labour must be done. It has to be done in Tonga, and it has been done in New Zealand and in this country, the native races might have had a chance for life, but now that chance is lost for ever. NEWS OF THE DAY.

Our cable messages of this morning contain several important and interesting items. The British Government threatened to prosecute Messrs. Davitt, Healy, and Redmond if they persisted in going about the country making incendiary speeches. They appear not to have heeded the warning, for the latter message states that Mr. Redmond, who is to be prosecuted for sedition, whilst Messrs. Davitt and Healy have been called upon to find sureties for their good behaviour, otherwise they will be imprisoned. The British Government has decided not to send a committee of the House of Commons, and consequently the prorogation of the Imperial Parliament, which was to have taken place yesterday, is delayed. Steps are being taken by the Governor of Natal to re-instate Cetewayo as King of Zululand at the earliest moment. The French are displaying their aggressive spirit in the case of the French demands upon the island of Madagascar. The French Government has announced its intention to bring in a bill for the establishment of a French protectorate over the province of Tananarive, and to the inconclusive character of the evidence taken by the commission against Arabi, neither he nor his fellow rebels are to be allowed to return to Egypt. The French are displaying their aggressive spirit in the case of the French demands upon the island of Madagascar. The French Government has announced its intention to bring in a bill for the establishment of a French protectorate over the province of Tananarive, and to the inconclusive character of the evidence taken by the commission against Arabi, neither he nor his fellow rebels are to be allowed to return to Egypt. The French Government has decided not to send a committee of the House of Commons, and consequently the prorogation of the Imperial Parliament, which was to have taken place yesterday, is delayed. Steps are being taken by the Governor of Natal to re-instate Cetewayo as King of Zululand at the earliest moment.

A banquet was given to-day in celebration of the opening of the railway from Hawthorne to Lilydale. It was largely attended, among the guests being Sir Bryan O'Loghlin, Messrs. Bent, Dobson, L. de Smith, and a number of other members of Parliament. In responding to the toast of the Ministry, Sir B. O'Loghlin said that, notwithstanding the revision of taxation to the amount of £10,000 a month made by Government, the revenue for November was £200,000 in excess of that for the corresponding month of last year. This colony was making steady and positive progress and the improvement was likely to be still more pronounced. Sir W. J. Clarke, who was amongst the others, responded to the toast of Parliament, and experienced a very hearty reception.

SPORTING INTELLIGENCE.

ALL ENGLAND ELEVEN V. ELEVEN OF NEW SOUTH WALES.

The contest between the two teams, the English cricketers and the eleven of New South Wales, commenced yesterday, on the Association Cricket Ground, Monmouth Park. The weather was cold and cheerless, with a boisterous wind from the south-east, which blew in fitful gusts over the cricket arena and its surroundings. It was unpleasant for the onlookers of the game, and had quite a depressing effect on the players engaged in the friendly strife. To the Englishmen, who have heard of the genial weather of the sunny south, it must have been disappointing in the extreme, and many of them were heard to declare that the day was colder than is experienced during the English summer. A cold rain day is not conducive to a display of good cricket, and the play generally was therefore not of that high standard which it would have been had the elements been propitious. It had a marked effect on the attendance. The pavilion and members' room were well thronged, but the grand stand and lawn were sparsely patronised, there being an absence of the fair sex. Although it was well-known that New South Wales would not be represented by anything approaching to her full strength, yet a good deal of interest was manifested in the match, not so much on the prospect of our men making bold bids for victory, as in the desire to witness the skill of the visitors, who are undoubtedly the finest combination of cricketers that ever left the old country. When it was ascertained that the New South Wales contingent of the Australian Eleven would not uphold the honour of the colony the match was generally regarded as a certain victory for the visiting team, but at the same time too many could not be given to our present champions for the determination with which they tackled on their armour for what appeared to them to be a hopeless contest. Owing to the unpropitious weather, the display of cricket shown during the day was far from being first-class, if we except the very dexterous bat-keeping of E. F. S. Tyle, and the fielding of A. G. Steel. While the first innings was in progress, the wind grew fiercer, and the rain fell in such a manner as to render the match almost impossible to continue; therefore the malady of the rain, Barnes, Davis, and one or two others in the field is easily explained. To use a cricketer's phrase, the ball is "too hot" for them to hold. T. Powell, the New South Wales captain, was the first to bat, and acted ably in sending his men in first to bat. The turf was in excellent condition, and the match was well played, but the rain was too much for the players, and the match was abandoned after the first innings.

into Powell, who drove Barlow grandly to long field on 4, bringing 60. In the next over Moss had a rare slice of luck, hitting a ball from Barlow fair into the hands of Bates at mid-off, who failed to make the catch, to Barlow's great astonishment. This was the second catch dropped by Bates from the Lancashire bowler. A long period of time and an interesting cricket episode, as A. G. Steel and Barlow, the batsman strictly on the defensive. At last Moss played one from A. G. Steel the slips for 4, but in the same over he gave a catch to Bates at extra mid-off, which was accepted. 5-21-67. Moss did not play with his accustomed vigour for his runs. Barlow, who took the place of Bates, next appeared, and, substituting Morley, Powell, and Barlow, he hit Barlow to the off for 3, coming 70 to make his appearance on the board. From A. G. Steel Barlow obtained a couple, and a fourth over two balls, the ball on each occasion being hit by Barlow. Though no runs were being made from Barlow, yet the captain made another change, substituting Morley, Powell, and Barlow, he hit Barlow to the off for 3, coming 70 to make his appearance on the board.
